Boston, May 26. 1862.

My dear friend Webb,

This will probably be handed to you by, and will serve to introduce to you, the Rev. Frederick Frothingham, a good man & true, a faithful Christian Minister, and a steadfast abolitionist, - every way worthy of your esteem & confidence, "if he is my cousin". He is one of the few men in the American pulpit who have never blinked the question of Slavery, nor shunned to tell his hearers of the true character of that System & of their duty in regard to it. He was born in Canada, & until arriving to manly man's estate was a subject of your Government. In now visiting England he desires the opportunity to become acquainted with some of those who have so long & steadfastly befriended the struggling cause of Freedom here, and with yourself among them.

For any kindness shown to him, & for any facilities, in looking about Dublin & its environs, & in extending his acquaintance among its Antislavery & other good people, afforded to him, I shall reckon myself increasingly your debtor.

With sincere & warm regard

Ever truly Yours

Sam'l. May Jr.
